Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

H. HUSKEY'S appeal for a large attendance at the state meeting in Little Rock High School at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning, to discuss a substitute program for the AAA, should be taken seriously by Hempstead county's producers. The national administration has adopted the policy of going direct to the land for advice on land policies—and every county owes it to itself to be represented.

New British King Quit Playboy Role, Settled to Work

Wales, Edward the 8th,
Took Up Serious Task
Some Years Ago

WIDELY TRAVELED
Head of Largest Empire Able Trained for His Tremendous Job

In days of strain and stress for all the world, but especially for the vast empire he is called to rule Edward Albert, long known as the Prince of Wales, comes a paramount figure. This is the first of a series of stories by Milton Bronner, NEA Service London correspondent, whose long residence there gives him unusual qualifications to present this up-to-the-minute and intimate picture of the man who will be known to the future as Edward VIII.

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
LONDON—When death came to King George V, and Edward VIII automatically became King of England, death came also to another world figure.

That was the slim, boyish-looking sportsman and globetrotter known to a generation of newspaper readers as the Prince of Wales.

In due time the man who has held that title for almost 25 years, will be duly proclaimed "Our only lawful and rightful Liege Lord Edward VIII, by the Grace of God King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British territories beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith, and Emperor of India."

Then the Prince of Wales will indeed be dead. In beginning his reign, he steps into another character, begins another life.

There are many evidences that this new life had well begun even before the death of his father, George V. Of late years, Edward had become markedly more serious, more mature. He is nearly 42, though the right care with which he has preserved his youthful figure and appearance deceived many.

As king, the free-and-easy manner, the informal appearance in public, the globe-trotting, the night-clubbing, the comparatively simple manner of life, will all become impossible.

Deep Affection Between Edward and His Father

Despite past rumors that Edward Albert did not intend to ascend the throne, it is now clear that he faces his task resolutely though perhaps reluctantly. That reluctance has been somewhat misunderstood as an unwillingness to assume the staggering responsibility of heading the empire on which the sun never sets, and on which the sun never sets, and on which the sun never sets.

"Licensed Evils" Flayed at Rally of Prohibitionists

Rev. Brewster and Cannon Hit Liquor Traffic in Hope Addresses

CANNON HITS PRESS

Liquor "Can Buy the Papers—But We Have to Pay for Space"

By LEONARD ELLIS

Approximately 150 persons heard the Rev. Thomas Brewster and Dr. J. L. Cannon denounce "licensed evils" of the state government at a prohi rally Tuesday afternoon at Hope city hall.

The meeting, scheduled to start at 2 p. m., was delayed nearly an hour and a proposal that the county be stumped by dry forces preceding the local option liquor election set for February 18, did not come before the group.

Attorney John P. Vesey, executive head of the prohi forces, explained that because of the delay that plans for a stump tour would be discussed at a later date.

The rally opened with five musical numbers by the Hope Boys band, led by L. E. Crumpler, band master.

Brewster's Speech

Attorney Vesey introduced the Rev. Thomas Brewster, pastor of First Presbyterian church of Hope, who spoke briefly on morals and character-building.

He said the state government had licensed three evils which he named as follows:

"First, is the divorce evil," which he said "strikes at the very heart of the social system and our home."

"Second, is the race track evil and its wide-spread gambling."

"Third, is the licensed liquor evil which we are here today to discuss in an effort to abolish it," the pastor said.

"The only argument for those who defend these three evils is the revenue argument," and that, the pastor said, "is the poorest argument in the world."

The liquor interests of the state are organized. We must get organized ourselves to combat them.

"There is not an argument in the world in favor of whisky. The liquor traffic destroys the body, the mind and will destroy the soul if allowed to do so," he shouted.

The Rev. Mr. Brewster warned the dry forces of over-confidence in the approaching local option liquor election and then introduced the featured speaker, Dr. J. L. Cannon, former Hope minister and now pastor of First Methodist church of DeQueen.

Dr. J. L. Cannon Speaks

Dr. Cannon reviewed his experience with the liquor traffic and pointed out its evils to mankind.

Before launching into his speech he asked the question:

"Why don't you stick to preaching?" "They ask me that and I'll answer them," he shouted.

"A religion that does not stand out against evil is no religion at all. Liquor is an evil. The Bible says so." He then referred to several passages in the Bible.

"At present," he said, "we have the most gigantic liquor and gambling interests in the history of the state. They are selling the people of Arkansas the vilest stuff that was ever peddled out to a swine."

"The liquor traffic has no more interest for a woman's tears than they do for a pig squeal. They can buy the newspapers and all the other professions and activities of a civilized land, must bend before the truth that a law is only what the overwhelming majority of the people are willing to obey."

Our contribution to the temperance cause seems to be the only one that has cost anybody any real money in recent years.

The Star rejected whisky advertising in 1935 totaling $1,465.32. That was the gross amount. There were the following deductions:

Our arbitrary action cost the advertising agencies 15 per cent, or $219.80, plus 2 per cent discount, which was $24.91 additional.

Our action cost The Star's advertising brokers 13 per cent, or $183.09. And the newspaper itself, in the ten months that whisky was legalized in 1935, March through December, lost the remainder, or $1,037.52—an average of $103.75 net per month.

The Star's position is simply this: that a community that can own and operate a complex public utility like an electric light and water plant, can control the liquor problem as much as it will ever be controlled. It is a position endorsed by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., former banker of the Anti-Saloon League, and many others.

The State of Iowa, more "dry" politically than Arkansas ever was, adopted a state dispensary plan when the Eighteenth Amendment was repealed. Iowa put one publicly-owned store in each city the size of Hope. Iowa forbids whisky advertising, Iowa forbids the store from displaying whisky in its window.

A similar plan was recommended to the Arkansas legislature last spring by Governor Futrell—and the prohibitionists rejected it.

Dr. Revis to Speak Here Wednesday Night

Dr. J. O. Revis, field secretary of the Foreign Missionary committee of the Southern Presbyterian church, will deliver a public address Wednesday night at First Presbyterian church.

The address is scheduled to start at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. Revis will be accompanied on his visit here by Mrs. Revis.

"Home Fire" Burns On

Fire still smoldered in the chimney of E. Freeman's house at Fayette, Ala. after a tornado had moved the dwelling 15 feet and left it sagging, but still upright, as shown here. The midwinter twister, accompanied by bitter cold, killed four in Alabama and 13 in the vicinity of the Georgia-Alabama-Florida state lines, and caused heavy property damage.

HOW ABOUT IT?

The Star has information that on Bruner-Ivory Handle company's last payday, Friday, January 17, Eddie Williams, agent for the Williams package liquor store, appeared at the plant, collecting or soliciting, or both. How about it, Mr. Williams? You were warned last fall that the package-store law restricts transactions to your place of business. The Star is filing a complaint with Earl R. Wiseman, State Commissioner of Revenues.

Liquor Prosecution at Nashville Fails

After 2 Mistrials George Kimberly's Whisky Is Returned

Nashville, county-seat of Howard which "outlawed" liquor sales last year, had two cases of liquor drifting around town Wednesday—and nobody could do anything about it.

It was the aftermath of the arrest of George Kimberly, Nashville man, who was caught driving into his garage with two cases of whisky. Authorities arrested him on suspicion of having whisky for sale. He was prosecuted by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Jack Owens, defended by Attorney Jim Jackson, and the case was heard at two jury trials, presided over by Mayor Chester Hill as ex-officio justice of the peace.

Mayor Hill told The Star over the telephone Wednesday that the first jury, composed of four women and eight men deadlocked at 9 to 3 for acquittal.

At the second trial the jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction, causing a mistrial as in the first hearing.

Mayor Hill, explaining that it was customary in justice of the peace hearings to dismiss a case after two mistrials, said the action had been dropped and Kimberly's whisky was returned to him.

Under the state law it is legal for a person to keep whisky in his person in "dry" territory, providing he does not attempt to sell it.

He said that unless greater support was given within the next few years he couldn't see how the college could operate. The Christian education committee urged financial support both for Ouachita and Central colleges.

Plans Considered for Oil Embargo Against Italians

League Orders Committee to Study Effectiveness of Such a Measure

COAL, IRON IS PASSED

Mutual Pact Between Britain, France, Turkey, Greece Announced

GENEVA—(P)—The League of Nations sanctions committee decided Wednesday to appoint a special committee of governmental experts to examine from a technical standpoint the effectiveness of applying an oil embargo against Italy.

No action was taken on proposed coal, iron and steel sanctions.

The council encountered a sensational incident when Baron Ompeo Aloisi of Italy, protested against a plan to transfer 75,000 Swiss francs to the sanctions committee to meet expenses.

Aloisi cast the only dissenting vote.

Capture of City Reported

ROME—(P)—Marchal Pietro Badoglio reported to Mussolini from East Africa Wednesday that the strategically important city, Neghelli, had been captured by the Italian cavalry. Mussolini cabled his congratulations.

Assistance Pact Made

GENEVA—(P)—The League of Nations announced Wednesday the conclusion of a mutual assistance pact between Great Britain, France, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia to operate if Italy attacks any one of them.

Federal Grant Is Sought for Prison

Survey to Be Made to Determine If State Is Eligible

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—The prison industries reorganization administration will start a survey March 1 of the Arkansas prison system to determine if the state is eligible for a federal loan or grant for improvements.

The money would be used for land purchases, construction of brick or stone buildings and the installation of prison industries.

The federal agency was created last September and the survey will be made without cost to the state. James P. Davis, of Washington, the director, explained the new program Tuesday to members of the state planning and penal boards.

He said main objectives of the PIRA were to aid states in improving penal conditions and in developing industries, and to minimize competition with private industry in the manufacture of penitentiary-made goods.

A hearing then is expected to be set on new action claiming that Hudspeth's constitutional rights had been violated when he was sentenced on a statute law previously repealed.

Smoker Thursday at Hope SCS Office

Craig Rosborough Sends Out Invitations to Representative Group

An invited number of local men will attend a smoker at the Soil Conservation Service office in Hope at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night, according to invitations sent out by Craig Rosborough, project manager.

In the course of his letter of invitation Mr. Rosborough wrote:

"These staff members are living in your town. Have you met all of them and do you understand the beneficial effects that your community should enjoy from the co-operative soil conservation program?"

"The farmers have profited in the past from the natural resources which do not exist today; and it has been said, 'The soil problem of this country and other countries arises from the necessity of growing concrete highways, modern homes and motor cars out of the same soil that produced in the virgin state only the cabin, the road through the clearing, and the old "peeing wagon."'

"On soil depleted by 60 years of continuous erosion and cropping the farmer of today must pay 10 times as much tax as his grandfather paid, and he must spend 10 times as much for comfort and education."

New Deal's Farm Plan Challenged

Senator Norris Attacks Constitutionality of AAA Substitute

WASHINGTON—(P)—The constitutionality of the administration's two-year half billion dollar substitute for the AAA was challenged by Senator Norris Wednesday coincident with its formal introduction in congress.

The New Deal's substitute for the defunct Farmers Day entertainment has been set for next Saturday, January 25. Because the event is always held at this time of the year, it has become almost an institution with the farmers of the Hope trade territory.

The entire program will be held in the implement dealer's store, Mr. Miller said.

In explaining the purpose of the day to a Star reporter, Mr. Miller stated that the idea was expressed up to the title given to the occasion.

"Once each year," he said, "we set aside a day on which we make no effort to sell merchandise. Instead, we extend an invitation to the farmers to come in and be our guests at an all-day entertainment. In this way, we hope to express our appreciation for the goodwill and patronage extended our firm by the farmers of the Hope trade territory."

The program, as outlined, calls for a number of sound motion pictures to be exhibited at the McCormick-Deering dealer's store. All the pictures have been so recently released that they will have been exhibited only twice before they are brought to Hope. Mr. Miller called particular attention to a film which the value of terracing farm land to prevent washing and soil erosion. While most of the pictures are of a farming nature, he said that one film would show work being done on and the completion of the new Boulder dam in Colorado.

Every farmer in the trade territory is invited, Mr. Miller said, to attend the event.

House Concludes Congress' Action by Vote 346 to 58

Will Become Law Whether President Signs It or Not, Prediction

NEED ONLY 10 DAYS

If President Delays Signing That Long, Bill Becomes a Law

WASHINGTON—(P)—Immediate payment of the soldiers bonus was voted Wednesday by congress, completing congressional action on the measure.

The measure now goes to the White House and a possible veto as soon as Speaker Byrnes and Vice President Garner sign it.

Administration leaders have predicted that the bill will become a law whether or not Mr. Roosevelt signs it. The house vote was 346 to 58.

Appeal to President

WASHINGTON—(P)—An influential group in congress Tuesday contemplated a joint appeal to President Roosevelt to let the new bonus bill become a law without either signing or vetoing the measure as permitted by the constitution.

The constitution says that if congress remains in session for 10 days after passing a measure and the president takes no action the measure becomes law.

Those favoring such a course "to the president expressed the opinion that it would do the Roosevelt prestige no harm, while the publicity attendant upon the over-riding of a veto might impair his popular standing."

Another angle was that such a course would relieve many administrative supporters who fear the "cranks" vote of the embargoists voting against the president on a clear-cut an issue.

A Landslide for Old Long Machine

Leche Has 83,241-Vote Lead Over Dear for Louisiana Governorship

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Unofficial returns from 469 of the 1,575 precincts in the latest count Wednesday of Tuesday's primary election, showed a landslide for the Long political organization for governor to 83,241 over the anti-Long candidate, Cleveland Dear.

The vote was 140,758 for Leche, to 57,517 for Dear.

As the votes dribble in it appeared that all Long candidates for statewide office would share in the landslide.

Governor Allen will finish Long's term in the senate.

Allen Ellender was elected to the full six-year term over Congressman John Sandlin.

Long Candidates Lead

NEW ORLEANS—(P)—Judge Richard Leche, the late Huey Long's candidate for governor, held a huge majority in Tuesday's Democratic primary with practically no votes reported except from New Orleans.

Reports from 281 of the state's 1,575 precincts, gave Leche 100,081 votes to 38,498 for anti-Long candidate, Cleveland Dear.

The Long candidates were leading elsewhere in the state with only scattered returns from country precincts. Many parishes announced the vote would not be announced until Wednesday.

In the race for the unexpired Senate term of Long, Gov. O. K. Allen (Long) had 2,139 votes and Frank Looney (anti-Long), 1,188 votes in returns from 27 country precincts.

Earl Long, brother of Senator Long, led Clement Moss (anti-Long), 1,374 votes to 748 in the race for lieutenant governor with 22 country precincts reporting.

Long Adherent Leads

In the Supreme Court race, which may swing the balance of power in the state's highest tribunal from the Long to the anti-Long side, Ann Ponder (Long) was leading W. Carruth Jones (anti-Long), 138 to 1 votes in reports from four of the 27 precincts in the Fifth district. Columbus Reid, a third candidate, had no votes.

Judge Leche said the returns indicated a "landslide" for the Long candidates and "complete vindication" of the late Senator Long.

Governor Allen served notice of intention to run for re-election in 1938.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Buying food properly is not just a matter of choosing anything that tickles the fancy, and laying down the money. The person who does the family marketing must keep in mind a number of facts.

For instance, she must consider the varying appetites of dad, mother, and the others. If your father is a laborer, he'll need more food energy than he would if he were a clerical worker. Brothers and sisters at work will require more calories than those at school.

Perhaps Brother Bill's an athlete; if so, he should have more food energy than Harold, the quiet, studious brother.

A quart of milk for each child and a pint for each adult will provide one-fourth of the total calories your family needs each day. Bread and cereals furnish another fourth. Fruits and vegetables supply one-fifth to one-sixth of the calories.

If the purse runs low, more dried fruits and canned vegetables may be used. Remember, however, that canned tomatoes, fresh cabbage, and potatoes provide vitamin C in large amounts, and that spinach, string beans or green peas, carrots, and oranges also afford important vitamins and mineral salts.

Fats are frequently expensive, but good milk provides butter fat. If your family gets the amount that it ought to have, Mother need not worry so much about the vitamin A that comes from butter.

In general, we use too much sugar. Syrups and sugars should constitute about 10 per cent of our total calories. Dietary authorities believe that children particularly need not overemphasize size meat. A half ounce of meat for a child 8 to 10 years old, an ounce for one 11 to 14, and two ounces for an older child or grown-up, should do.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Men are strange that way. That is, some men are. They take it as a personal affront when the new baby is not what they have particularly ordered.

Mr. Brown has a boy of three and now he demanded a girl. He had six brothers of his own and the whole Brown line runs to males. This was to be a special order, a pink and white doll, this last one. He was going to show up his brothers and have at least one little dimpled darling to wrap his heart around.

Instead, as he looks grimly through the glass of the nursery door in the hospital, he sees in the tiny bed, wheeled close for inspection, another specimen of his kind; an unbecomingly one at that, who makes him think more of a baby sparrow than a human being.

"Ugly little devil, isn't he?" remarks Mr. Brown turning away.

Blighting Young Lives

Of course, as the child grows older and becomes a fine manly little fellow, his father learns to love him almost as well as his brother. But underneath, he associates his disappointment with Bobby. Then in three years Betty is born. A round little dumpling who more than compensates for her daddy's former frustration.

From the very first he makes no bones about his preference. The boys instinctively step back to make place for the new queen. It is her ruination and theirs. Particularly Bobby's, because he has never been quite forgiven for being what he was.

And there is Mr. Smith, too, whose first-born just has to be a boy. In his case it goes deeper than the usual desire of first fathers, because Mr. Smith was a bachelor for years, of the misogynist type, afraid of women and most of their kind. He scarcely looks at his new daughter when her sex is announced, and plainly shows his wife his hurt.

Mothers Suffer Tortures

Like Mr. Brown, he softens up a little as the girl grows older, and all appears to be forgiven. Mr. Smith has convinced even himself that he feels entirely different. But when Betty is born later, all the pent-up emotion he had been ready to shower on his first-born, gushes forth with double force toward this savior of his hopes. From the first his father is Teddy's slave.

All of which is unfortunate. Not a word may be spoken, yet the mother suffers torture, and it is bad for the children. There follows, usually, a certain unbalance, which children are quick to feel. It affects their attitude to family, and is the cause of much (otherwise unaccounted for) protective behavior. If not openly belligerent, the unfavored ones may be inwardly rebellious. A source of later trouble indeed.

And so, although men are not to be too severely blamed for their reactions to disappointment (such things are too deep, oftentimes, to be thoroughly understood), they would be wise to vow to Kwana Yin, goddess of compassion, to keep the secret to themselves. And to be as impartial as possible to all.

A Book a Day

Fort Smith Man to Head Baptists

Dr. B. B. Ferguson Elected President of State Association

HOPE SPRINGS.—(AP)—Dr. B. B. Ferguson, pastor of the First Baptist church, Fort Smith, was elected president of the Arkansas State Baptist convention here Tuesday night, succeeding Dr. O. J. Wade, Texarkana.

Other officers elected at the opening session of the four-day convention were the Rev. W. J. Hunsley, Second Baptist church, Hot Springs, and Dr. J. S. Comper, First Baptist church, Corns, vice presidents; the Rev. J. B. Luck, Magnolia, secretary; and E. J. A. McKinney, Little Rock statistical secretary.

Mr. Hunsley, welcoming approximately 700 delegates to the meeting, discussed the "Evil of Liquor."

"A fight must be waged," he said, "until the last liquor stores are wiped out of Arkansas."

He praised the Baptists as the "keepers of orthodox Christianity." L. D. Summers responded to the welcome.

Long-Faction Poll Worker Shot

A general fight at the first precinct of the Fifth ward in the old French Quarter in New Orleans resulted in the shooting of a man whose name was given as Gene Gill, 35. Police said he was a poll worker for the Gov. O. K. Allen-Long administration.

Mr. Gill was shot twice and wounded in the chest as he emerged from the Deatur street voting booth after the fight.

Another man booked as "Whitney" Schultz, 34, surrendered to officers and was detained in the shooting. Police of the Third precinct police station attributed the shooting to an election row which followed the slugging of Frank Gomez, who police said was a "home rule," or anti-Long captain. The STRANGE CASE OF JULIA CRAIG

by Nard Jones

COPYRIGHT NEA 1935

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JULIA CRAIG, pretty young secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD of the law firm of Woodford and Brooks, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Julia chooses an apartment with ANY MAN.

PETER KEMP, also employed by Woodford and Brooks, is in love with Julia. He encourages her ambitions. He gives Julia a letter of introduction to HENRY LAMM, band leader, but in the letter, asks Lamb not to give her a job. Julia discovers this and tells Peter everything over between them.

ROYAL NESBITT, friend of Amy's, promises to help Julia and a job as a singer, but days pass with no word from him.

Woodford gives a night party and asks Julia to come along to sing for his guests. When she hears the night club scene, the others have been detained, Julia goes to her room, falls asleep and when she awakes the host is in motion.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

IT seemed odd to Julia that in these alien surroundings she should have slept so soundly as not to hear Woodford and his guests come aboard. But perhaps, she told herself, the brisk sea air had got in its magic. She switched on the little lamp above her berth and looked at her strap-watch. It was past three, and this reassured her. Woodford and his guests, she decided, had come aboard and gone to sleep. Plunging the stateroom again into darkness, Julia allowed her head to sink back on the pillow.

When she awakened, the sun was streaming in through the port holes, brightening the little state-room. Julia dressed with an energetic swiftness she had never experienced in town. A moment later she was glad for this swiftness, for there was a knock at the stateroom door and she heard Woodford's voice wishing her a pleasant good morning.

"Ready for breakfast?" he asked.

"Yes..." Julia called out, then opened the door to find Woodford, looking fit and attractive in his white ducks and blue coat.

"We came aboard rather late last night," he apologized, "so I thought it better not to disturb you. Of course you'll meet the others this morning." He hesitated a moment. "I'm afraid, though, that none of them are quite up yet. I've told the cook to serve breakfast for two."

He guided Julia to the spacious after cabin where there was a small table set for two. A Japanese boy in white coat hovered over it so meticulously.

"Good morning, Oh," said Woodford pleasantly. "How about some of your delicious toast and crisp bacon?"

"Yissah..." Oh smiled, uncovered the halves of food grapefruit, and disappeared into the galley.

Woodford looked thoughtfully at Julia across the table.

"I'll tell you something about who's aboard. There's Royal Nesbitt."

Involuntarily Julia looked up and repeated the name, "Royal Nesbitt?"

"You know him?"

"Only slightly," Julia said. "He's a friend of the girl who rooms with me."

Highway Dept. Is Winner in Court

Collections Over Span Halted by Order of Martineau

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The state highway department won its fight Tuesday to halt collection of 25-cent tolls over the Whelan Springs Little Missouri river bridge between Clark and Nevada counties.

Federal Judge John E. Martineau modified an order last December in declaring that the receiver of the Whelan Springs bridge district should no longer collect the tolls.

The court held that charging tolls on the highway 53 span was in effect placing a barrier across a state-owned and maintained highway.

Judge Martineau also declared the highway department the proper authority to intervene in the suit of Paul Speer, trustee for bridge bondholders, against the Whelan Springs bridge district.

The 25-cent toll was placed on the bridge several weeks ago by federal court order after the district became delinquent on its bond principal and interest payments.

The highway department intervened on the claim that under a 1921 act, the bridge should be free since lands were assessed to pay the bonded indebtedness.

Arkansan Denies Kidnaping Plot

William Weaver Indicted as Actual Kidnaping in Bremer Case

ST. PAUL.—(AP)—William Weaver of Salem, Ark., second defendant to take the stand in the trial of three men charged with conspiracy in the Edward G. Bremer kidnaping, denied Tuesday he was in St. Paul on January 17, 1934, when the abduction occurred. He was indicated as an actual kidnaping.

Harry Sawyer, alleged "finger man," earlier denied any connection with the crime. The third defendant is Cassius McDonald, Detroit engineer, charged as a ransom money changer.

Temperatures can be gauged accurately by observing the gait of ants. Their speed increases as the mercury rises.

WOODFORD LAUGHED.

"I'm not astonished," Woodford must be a friend of every young woman in town."

"Well," said Julia, joining his laughter rather weakly, "that's quite a reputation to uphold."

"Royal does a good job of it, though..." They let's see, there's Hugo Nash. He's an architect, and a mighty good one."

Julia smiled. "Sounds like a stag cruise, so far, except for me."

"Oh, no. You'll like the two ladies we have aboard. Mrs. Joseph—she's a charming widow—and Cintra Lee."

"Cintra Lee? That name sounds familiar, somehow."

Woodford nodded. "You've probably heard of her, all right. She's a dancer, mainly. I think she's done something in Hollywood, too. With your ambitions, you ought to meet her."

"You've forgotten Smith Garland," Julia reminded him.

"No..." Woodford paused, then needlessly smoothed down his tie. "I meant to tell you. Garland was detained at the last moment and couldn't come along. I hope you won't be too disappointed."

Julia was disappointed, and bitterly so—but she hid her feelings as best she could.

"Perhaps," said Woodford, "we can arrange a meeting with him at another time. Meanwhile it will do no harm to have Nesbitt hear you. He has a good deal of influence with the people who could give you a chance. I think probably he can do something for you."

Julia smiled wryly as she recalled Nesbitt's promise the night he had called on Amy Sanders. "I'm sure he can," she said.

AFTER breakfast she joined Woodford in cigarettes under the canvas canopy on the after deck.

Julia and her employer had finished their cigarettes when the rest of the party began to join them, drifting to the after deck one by one. Cintra Lee came first. She was a dark girl, unbelievably slender, and somehow attractively despite her brilliant make-up.

Mrs. Joseph, who joined them a moment later, seemed much less approachable.

Royal Nesbitt was his debonair self, except for a minute or two of embarrassment when he confronted Julia. But whether his embarrassment was due to the fact that he hadn't kept his promise, or whether it was from some obscure sense of loyalty to Amy, Julia could not determine. Obviously he was with Cintra Lee, and Julia guessed that it was Nash who accompanied Mrs. Joseph.

There was some indefinable quality in the air which told Julia they were all assuming that she was Woodford's particular companion on the trip. Certainly Woodford's manner did nothing to dispel this assumption. Of course, Julia supposed, he wanted her to feel one of the little crowd. But she almost wished he would do or say something which would make it clear that she was aboard as an entertainer—and an amateur one, at that.

Bobcats Win 3rd Victory of Season

Smoother Waldo High School Here Tuesday Night, 40 to 10

The Hope High School Bobcats won their third straight victory of the season over Waldo High School Tuesday night by a lopsided score of 40 to 10.

The Waldo team was held scoreless in the first quarter, made six points the second quarter and four points the last half. The Bobcats made 15 points the first half and 24 points the last half.

High Reece was high point man with 12. Cargile and Turner tied for second place honors with 8 points each. T. Watkins was high point for Waldo with seven points.

The Bobcats showed a distinct improvement over last week's performance and from all appearances will be ready for the Arkadelphia High school Badgers, who will play at high school gymnasium Friday night.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rain!

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks junk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up."

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up."

When a man says "Black-Draught is good," it is probably because he remembers the prompt, refreshing relief it brought in constipation, biliousness. Its benefits are felt because it is a simple, herb laxative, so natural in composition and action that the sands and thousands of men women prefer it when a laxative is needed.

Prescott News in Brief

By DALE McKINNEY

Mrs. Daisy King died at Texarkana Tuesday morning. She was later removed to Prescott for burial. Funeral services will be held at the home of Mrs. Carl King Wednesday evening at 2:30. Burial will be at the DeAnn cemetery at Prescott.

The 1915 club will meet at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Blake Scott hostess.

Construction of the new home of Mrs. Horace Bemis whose home was destroyed by fire last year is progressing rapidly.

The Ozan Lumber Co. is doing quite a bit of construction work on a new building which they have recently purchased from the Prescott Lumber Co.

A large parking space is being made for cars in front of the Gem theater in order that traffic will not be crowded so badly when there is a show going on.

Ex-Sheriff J. D. Parker and son Harold have bought the old Miller place at the edge of Prescott on highway 67. They are planning to tear down the old two-story building and barn and build two new dwellings.

New British King

der whose flag lives one of every four people on the face of the earth. But the truth is nearer to this: Between the father, George V, and the son, there has been an extraordinary devotion and affection. Contrary to many princes, who have been impatient for power, Edward has always keenly hoped that his father would live and reign for a long, long time.

Part of the reluctance undoubtedly comes from realization that ascending the throne meant the end of being a lone eagle, and becoming a bird in a gilded cage.

Princely Duties Left Time for His Own Amusement

As Prince of Wales, of course, Edward was never a free man. But he had more freedom than his ruling father. As Prince, Edward had many public duties to perform and before him each morning was a long one. Much of his time was not his own. But there were still left many hours and days which he could enjoy like any other Englishman of means.

He could go off to Melton Mowbray, and without any fuss or feathers follow the Belvoir hounds through even that keen pleasure has been denied him in recent years, due to public apprehension that he might be hurt.

In London he could unobtrusively buy a couple of seats in a theater and attend the show with a friend. He could slip over to the Embassy Club, sit at a little table with friends like anybody else, and dance with women friends. He could pop into a friend's house in the afternoon for a cup of tea and an informal chat. He could travel.

WHAT THE SIX STORIES WILL TELL

1. The passing of the world figure which for 25 years as Prince of Wales, has remained a popular idol because of his easy, democratic ways, and Peter Pan of royalty. Recent years have shown a different and more mature Edward, how king.

2. The bachelor king who, his family and subjects are now beginning to believe, will never marry, though he has cut a swathe through the feminine hearts of the world for 25 years.

3. The soldier and sailor, who insisted on going to the front during the World war and came a great deal nearer getting killed than you would imagine. How these months have affected all his later life, and may well affect his reign.

4. Sportsman to the core, in the English manner, Edward puts behind him a long career as big game hunter, reckless rider, flyer and devotee of competitive games, setting a hot sartorial pace the while.

5. As "first salesman for the empire," Edward in recent years took the first steps in his more mature and serious career. Globe-trotting later became more to him than mere pleasure and education.

6. A new social consciousness, shocking to the more hide-bound of his associates, has marked the recent career and speeches of the new king, telling of the emergence of the mature ruler from the chrysalis of princedom.

ran the world and the empire, run over to America for a few weeks of "roughing it" on his "E. P. Ranch" in Alberta.

As King Edward, His Life Becomes "Ceremonial"

All that is one now, and with it goes the Prince of Wales of the sobriety and the popular magazines. What Edward did as Prince of Wales he can not do as king.

The king may not indulge in any sports in which there is danger of injury to himself.

When he visits the home of a friend, it is a royal procession of state.

When he goes to the theater he must sit rigid and quiet in the royal box.

The king may not go quietly to the Embassy Club for an afternoon of darning. The king may not take impromptu trips abroad. For if he does, the crown must be placed in commission during his absence, and that is a bothersome and complicated business.

The king must live pretty much at home in his various castles and palaces. He must be on hand constantly for consultation with his ministers. He has a lot of formal and boring duties and functions to give and to attend. When he dances, it is very gravely at his own palaces, and then only in the most rigidly formal way, with only the socially select.

Travel Gave the Prince Broad Knowledge of People

The life as prince which Edward now leaves behind him had this advantage: it gave him a broad knowledge of the world and of people which came to few monarchs reared in seclusion.

Edward VIII comes to the English throne as the most widely-traveled monarch in her history. Repeated journeys to the ends of the earth have given him a personal acquaintance with the world and the most remote British dominions.

He has met and listened to more hundreds and thousands of people of all climes, religions and classes than any other king. He has literally thousands of personal friends of all conditions, ranging from haughty dukes to common soldiers in the ranks. His democratic manner is apparently quite genuine, and has no smack of condescension.

Democratic Outlook Shown in New Social Interests

The spirit back of it is well illustrated by the story of his dry comment to a friend who remonstrated that because of his casual association with all kinds of people there were some in blue-blooded circles who objected that the prince was getting "commoner and commoner."

That was all right, responded the prince, "because as I get commoner and commoner, Lascelles gets royalter and royalter."

The reference was to Viscount Lascelles, his brother-in-law and husband of Princess Mary, and the deduction has been made that Edward was not fond of the aristocratic pretensions of his relative-by-marriage.

This essentially democratic outlook has revealed itself of recent years in more important things than mere social contacts.

Active work for social relief causes, welfare funds, slum elimination plans and model housing projects, vibrant speeches to welled audiences on their social responsibilities, trips through the hovels and dreary slums of unemployed miners—all these things are straws that point to a new Edward who has gradually been replacing the happy-go-lucky prince for several years. His hard work in the cause of empire salesmanship and extending foreign markets, and his devotion to the welfare of his fellow World war veterans have been additional indications of this change.

Titles Now Simplified, But a Bachelor Still

Prince of Wales, Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, Great Steward of Scotland, High Steward of Windsor, Knight of the Garter, Member of the Privy Council, Knight of the Order of the Thistle, Knight of the Order of St. Patrick, Grand Commander of the Star of India, Grand Master of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, Grand Commander of the Order of the Indian Empire, Admiral of the Fleet, General of the Army, and Chief Marshal of the Air Force—all these titles and impressive honors of the prince now merge and are swallowed up in the titles of King and Emperor.

But among those titles, one is conspicuously absent—the title of husband. Edward ascends the throne of England a bachelor king, one of the few in all the thousand-year history of the British crown.

The blond baby, the slim public-school boy, the youthful subaltern, the international playboy, and devil-may-care sportsman, the model of fashion, the Peter Pan of royalty—all these have passed.

In their place stands a man of nearly 42, his hair beginning to thin, the beginnings of crow's-feet at the corners of his eyes, but with youth full figure and vigor unimpaired, tactful, democratic, practical-minded and with a rather quick, dry wit, a personality that marks him out of any gathering—His Majesty, Edward VIII.

NEXT: Though Edward comes to the throne a bachelor king, few royal princesses have fluttered more feminine hearts than he in his years as Prince of Wales. Princesses and commoners have in turn been connected with his name in public print, but the British public is at last convinced that he intends never to marry.

"Please Do Not Disturb"

SEE, MR. X—IT ISN'T ANY MY BUSINESS, BUT I CAN SEE YOU'RE AWFULLY WORRIED ABOUT SOME-THING. IF YOU'D ONLY TELL ME ABOUT IT—WELL, YOU LET ME HELP YOU?

SURE! PARK MY WHISKERS SOME PLACE! THEY TICKLE

IT'S SO WONDERFUL UP HERE—ALL BY OURSELVES! I DON'T WANT TO SPOIL IT ALL BY EVEN THINKING ABOUT ANYTHING BUT YOU BOOTS

Might Be a Boomerang

NOW GIVE THREE CHEERS FOR EASY, YE WOBBLE-KNEED WEASEL, OR I'LL CHEW YER EARS OFF.

WOW! THIS BEATS! SHE'S A CIRCUS! A RIOT!

WE ORTA SEND HER TO CONGRESS

HUH! WOT SAT?

YOU IDIOT! YOU WANT TO LOSE EASY THE ELECTION? STOP SHOWIN' THESE DANG FOOLS A GOOD TIME OR THEY'LL TUNGET HE'S EVEN IN THE RACE!
